airberlin winter schedule 2017/18: More flights to the US than ever

- 45 percent more flights to the USA than last winter: full year flight programme to all of the eight airberlin destinations in the United States
- New in winter from Dusseldorf: non-stop to Boston, Orlando, San Francisco and more frequent flights to New York
- New in winter from Berlin: Flights four times a week from Berlin to San Francisco

Following the expansion of airberlin's route network to include US routes for the upcoming summer season, airberlin now plans to increase its flight programme to the United States by around 45% in Winter 2017/18. From its hubs in Berlin and Dusseldorf, airberlin will offer a total of 58 non-stop flights per week to the USA when the winter schedule begins in October. The airline is thereby offering a full year flight programme to all of their eight destinations in the US.

Compared to last year, there will be an additional three new destinations from Dusseldorf and a total of 16 weekly flights: Orlando with five flights per week, Boston and San Francisco with four weekly connections each. airberlin is the only airline which flies to these destinations from Dusseldorf. Two additional flights per week will be available on the existing New York route. airberlin will also fly non-stop to Los Angeles, Miami and Fort Myers all year round from Dusseldorf.

For the first time in Winter 2017/18, four flights a week to San Francisco will be departing from Berlin-Tegel. Thanks to these additions in the schedule there will be daily services to San Francisco out of the airberlin hubs, on Sundays even twice a day. Furthermore airberlin will also offer flights from Berlin to New York, Chicago and Miami all year.

All of these flights are optimally integrated into the entire route network, providing numerous feeder and connecting flights. All of airberlin's long-haul flights to the USA will use A330-200 jets with 19 full flat seats in business class and 271 seats in economy class.

Flights can be booked on airberlin.com, by phone on 0180 6 - 334 334 or at a travel agency.
